The Historic Preservation Fund & Local Commissions

↳ What is the HPF?

The Historic Preservation Fund (HPF) is a federal funding source that supports the core historic preservation activities of State and Tribal Historic Preservation Offices (SHPOs and THPOs) under the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

HPF funding helps to identify, protect, and preserve historic places in communities across the United States. It supports essential programs such as:

- Revitalizing communities through the Historic Tax Credit Program, which fuels investment in the rehabilitation of historic buildings.
- Identifying and documenting historic places to ensure their stories and significance are recognized and preserved.
- Giving locals a voice in federal projects to protect historic resources and cultural heritage.
- Overseeing the National Register of Historic Places to honor America's historic treasures.
- Equipping local preservationists with the knowledge and skills they need to make a lasting impact in their communities through education and training.

↳ When was the HPF created? How is it funded?

The HPF was established by Congress in 1976 when the National Historic Preservation Act was amended.

The HPF is funded through revenue from offshore oil and gas leases on the Outer Continental Shelf. The fund was established with the idea that revenue from the extraction of non-renewable resources (oil and gas) should support the preservation of another non-renewable resource—historic and cultural assets.

NAPC advocates for effective practices, programs and funding that benefit local preservation programs.

In the past year, NAPC focused on sharing information about the nation's preservation framework so that local commissions are better informed of how federal and state actions will impact their local programs.

Year Built: 1874-79
Architect: Alfred B. Mullett
Builder: Unknown

Old City Hall stands on the block designated on Lincoln's original city plan of 1867 as "Market Square," which was initially planned as a stopping point for visitors and an open-air market for residents. In 1873 the City deeded the block to the U.S. Government to induce the construction of a properly monumental federal courthouse and post office, befitting a state capital. The richly textured limestone building at 916 O Street was the result, constructed between 1873 and 1879 and now known as Old City Hall reflecting its use from 1907 to 1969. Alfred B. Mullett was the original architect, in his role as "Supervising Architect of the Treasury." That office in Washington, D.C. was responsible for designing
